UD ANNOUNCES SUMMER OFFERINGS IN THEOLOGICAL STUDIES AND PASTORAL MINISTRIES

DAYTON, Ohio, February 13, 1981 -- A summer fare of 12 graduate-level courses, seven workshops and a lecture series will be offered by the University of Dayton's Department of Religious Studies. The summer session runs from June 22 to July 31, 1981.

Dr. Richard Boulet, director of graduate programs in Religious Studies, indicates that "this summer's offerings, as with those of previous summers, provide a broad selection of courses designed to meet the needs and interests of the graduate students. Course offerings are in biblical, historical, systematic, pastoral, and cultural areas. They address themselves to a variety of academic and professional concerns in today's Church."

Three-credit-hour courses may be undertaken in "Contemporary Old Testament Criticism," "Luke/Acts," "the Quest for Jesus Today: Catholic, Protestant, Jewish," "Augustine to Occam," "Sacramental Theology," "Liturgy," "Christian Marriage: A Theological Perspective," "Theology of Prayer," "Approaches to Morality," "Theology of Sexuality," "Pastoral Ministry and Catechesis," and "Counseling and Pastoral Problems."

The workshops, which are one-credit-hour, short-term programs, will explore "Religious Poetry," "TV and Family Views," "Religion and Film," "Ministry with Separated and Divorced Catholics," and "Christ and Mary."

The summer program is sponsored in conjunction with the Dayton Cluster of Seminaries.

The Graduate Religious Studies program at the University of Dayton is 20 years old and attracts over 100 persons to the campus each summer from throughout 24 states, 48 dioceses, and 35 religious communities. Garden apartment accommodations are available which include kitchen facilities. A University dining hall is also open throughout the summer. Liturgical, cultural, and recreational opportunities are available on campus and within easy access to summer students.

Tuition for the graduate courses and workshops is $61 per credit hour; a $20 University Fee is also charged.

A series of lectures and seminars on "Christian Marriage and Family: Theological Perspectives" will be offered at no charge and will coincide with the course term. Lecturers will be announced in the near future.
